Cultural Teachings: First Nations Protocols and Methodologies

This inspirational book is a compilation of First Nations ceremonial customs and protocols and offers some historical background information. It provides a representation of foundational teachings in order to create an understanding of respectful and appropriate behavior when attending various ceremonies, feasts, songs, gatherings, healings and other traditional activities. It eloquently maintains the spiritual integrity of these First Nations practices. Guided by narratives of Elders as the framework, this valuable book was proudly authored collectively by the staff of the Cultural Resources and Languages Department at the Saskatchewan Indigenous Cultural Centre.

Land Based Education

A Teacher Resource Guide for Schools in Saskatchewan.

The Land Based Education framework, presented by the Saskatchewan Indigenous Cultural Centre, has been developed over the years to revitalize First Nations culture and First Nations people's relationship with the land. Through the involvement of a community's local members, teachers, Elders and leaders, this framework is designed to help achieve the students potential and to inspire a positive future for themselves, their families, and their community.

Teaching Sacred Language Curriculum

This curriculum gives our Traditional and Indigenous knowledge a place at the front lines in the journey of reviving and preserving our languages. It is developed from a First Nation perspective with the guidance of Elders, master teachers and language champions. The main strategies are based on the oral and visual language methodologies of TPR – Total Physical Response, ASLA – Accelerated Second Language Acquisition, and gives space for the use of orthographies. Its guiding principles are the Elders' outcomes acquired from the eight First Nation linguistic language groups in Saskatchewan.

Included is a holistic and seasonal year plan, stages for language revitalization, tips for working with Elders, and assessments based on a four point scale. Checklist templates for comprehension, daily routine rubrics and anecdotal records are included. The assessment templates are meant to be adaptable, modified, or differentiated. Included in the lesson plans are a structured set of 305 flashcards with contemporary pictures, designed by a First Nation youth artist to specifically coincide with the layout of the lessons.

The intention of the framework is to assist the language program to make it non-stressful, mobile and quick to set up, with room for the lessons to be adapted for use with any First Nation language. The focus is placed on the student and self-learning where the First Nation language leads the student in a fun, unique learning style and is meant for any age group or language level.

ayisiyiniwak: A Communications Guide

The goal of ayisiyiniwak: A Communications Guide is to increase understanding, respect and awareness of Indigenous culture to facilitate improved relationship building. This is a living document that will continue to develop as our relationships and understanding grows.

The term “Aboriginal” is defined in Section 35 (2) of the Constitution Act, 1982 as follows: “Aboriginal Peoples of Canada includes the Indian, Inuit and Métis peoples of Canada.”

In this document, the term Indigenous is used in place of Aboriginal to reflect more current practice. Indigenous refers collectively to First Nation, Métis and Inuit. Use of particular terms may be based on individual preference or historical definitions and may include Indian, Native or Aboriginal.

Many of the practices and teachings in the following document belong to the Cree people, as the majority of Indigenous people on Treaty 6 Territory are Cree. We also wish to acknowledge the many Saulteaux and Dakota people on this territory as well. As you read this Guide, it is important to acknowledge that respectful engagement protocols, language and teachings differ from nation to nation and even within treaty territories. For example, content in this Guide may not be appropriate for communication with Indigenous people in Regina, Moose Jaw and Yorkton, which are located on Treaty 4 Territory where many Ojibwa people live. It is up to you to gain a deeper understanding of appropriate practices by working directly with Indigenous people.

The Saskatchewan Indigenous Cultural Centre (SICC) has served First Nations people since 1972 and set the precedent for Indigenous education in Saskatchewan. The SICC strives to maintain the linguistic and cultural identity of First Nations cultures who inhabit what is now known as Saskatchewan: Plains Cree, Swampy Cree, Woodlands Cree, Dene, Saulteaux, Dakota, Nakoda and Lakota. The SICC is responsible to protect, preserve and promote culture and language of Saskatchewan First Nations people.

Today, most of our children are growing up with English as their first language, as that is what is being spoken in the home. Indigenous languages have spirits and can assist families in sharing values, traditions and cultural identities. Speaking our First Nations languages in our homes is the essence of language revitalization. Since language imprinting occurs in the early childhood developmental years, even before children are able to talk, they are already acquiring language. It is imperative that we begin talking to them in the language from the time they are born and in their early years.

Beginner and intermediate speakers should understand that what is truly required is a commitment to their language. The parent(s) or caregiver(s) do not have to be fluent as they are also learning with their child(ren). Fluent speakers sometimes believe that they must continue to speak to their child in English and/or that their child will not understand if spoken to in their Indigenous language. This is not true. They do understand and/or they will begin to understand by motioning or modeling to them what it is you are saying.

This Plains Cree Language Tool Kit was created to assist parents and caregivers who have the desire to bring their language into the home to work to understand and speak the Plains Cree language. It is a pilot tool kit. In the future, the SICC will expand on this tool kit to be available in all eight language groups of Saskatchewan.

Teacher/Student Manuals

Timeless and classic Cree resource materials developed for classroom learning that represent the efforts of many language instructors, Elders and community members. The kindergarten to grade three program is based on a structuralist view of the language that is best learned inductively. The emphasis is on understanding (comprehension), speaking and grammatical skills in reading and writing are incorporated as students' progress. The Grade 10-12 Curriculum Guides are developed by the Kawacatoose First Nation features units that integrate cultural themes selected by the community such as; I am Cree, Kinship, Mother Earth, Legends, Elders, Treaties and more. These Cree language resources are meant to be modified and adaptable and used as a framework to enhance First Nation language programming.

K'áíla Series Storybooks

An assortment of short stories focused on the main character K'áíla (Rose) as she takes part in family and community events. These narrative stories are based on daily activities at home and touch on fictional, entertaining stories that catch the readers interest while learning the First Nation language. The illustrations captivate the scenarios and enables the reader to explore through imagination. In regard to making the books fun and easy to read, the artwork supports the storylines and helps the reader and listener make connections with the visual imagery.

Verbs are taught using the Total Physical Response (TPR) method. This approach facilitates language comprehension and long term memory retention. Students are taught vocabulary by having them respond physically to commands.

Okinīns Series Storybooks

An assortment of short stories focused on the main character Okinīns (Rose) as she takes part in family and community events. These narrative stories are based on daily activities at home and touch on fictional, entertaining stories that catch the readers interest while learning the First Nation language. The illustrations captivate the scenarios and enables the reader to explore through imagination. In regard to making the books fun and easy to read, the artwork supports the storylines and helps the reader and listener make connections with the visual imagery.

Okinis Series Storybooks

An assortment of short stories focused on the main character Okinīs (Rose) as she takes part in family and community events. These narrative stories are based on daily activities at home and touch on fictional, entertaining stories that catch the readers interest while learning the First Nation language. The illustrations captivate the scenarios and enables the reader to explore through imagination. In regard to making the books fun and easy to read, the artwork supports the storylines and helps the reader and listener make connections with the visual imagery.

Saskatchewan Indigenous Cultral Centre

Vision Statement

Learning our ways, speaking our languages and living our lives as given by the Creator.

Mission Statement

Protect, Preserve and Promote the Cultures and Languages of First Nations*

[*Dene, Saulteaux, Dakota, Nakoda (Assiniboine), Lakota, nehithaw (Woodlands Cree), nehinaw (Swampy Cree) and nehiyaw (Plains Cree)]

Philosophy

The SICC has served First Nations people since 1972 and was the initial First Nations controlled educational institution serving at the provincial level. The Centre strives to maintain the cultural identity of First Nations culture who inhabit what is now known as Saskatchewan: Dene, Saulteaux, Dakota, Nakoda, Lakota, Woodlands Cree, Swampy Cree and Plains Cree.

Goals

- To protect and revive First Nations languages in Saskatchewan
- To preserve and transfer knowledge on First Nations history, culture and traditions
- To promote First Nations cultural and linguistic identity
- To improve the sustainability of SICC
- To strengthen and enhance the capacity of SICC
- To improve and enhance the profile of SICC
- To attract and retain skilled and qualified First Nations employees
- To create a healthy work environment
- To transfer knowledge of our spiritual beliefs
- To support the Elders Council in preserving oral history, teachings and spiritual knowledge

Community Education & Languages Department

The SICC Community Education and Language Department supports and serves the preservation, revitalization and retention of Saskatchewan First Nations' languages for present and future generations. Through the year, the SICC offers workshops for educators on effective and engaging language learning methodologies. The department is committed to working with communities to foster their expertise and build partnerships amongst the Saskatchewan's eight linguistic groups.

The SICC is proud to announce a new educational resource that is now available. It is called the Teaching Sacred Language - Curriculum. This resource will assist language teachers by providing structured sets of vocabulary and a set of visual flashcards that coincide with the thematic units. It is meant to be non-stressful, quick to set up and mobile. It is adaptable and flexible by providing space for all linguistic language groups and programs.

Audio/Visual Department

The primary mandate of the Audio/Visual (AV) – Technical Department is the recording of the cultural, community, governance and artistic endeavours of the First Nations of Saskatchewan. The department may provide services for cultural celebrations and other services to First Nations across Saskatchewan for a wide range of other events. The AV Department provides technical support and design input on a range of projects. The support and input provided includes a full range of printing services, audio visual recording, graphic design, photography services and sound production.

SICC Online Retail Store
